Weekly Status:

There was no status on last week, because everything was explained in our project proposals. We have been having lots of trouble with our hello world code. We changed back to BREW language, after careful considerations from our advisor. The BREW language is a lot more difficult than we have imagined, and we are trying our best to learn it. We are currently behind schedule only because of this minor technicality. The main problem is after compiling, the code will not link. And it does not display the results on the screen. For this week we will try calling BREW and asking for technical advice.
