Right now we are wrapping things up and making sure we are all set for Senior Design Day. After talking it over with some of the members in my group who are more familiar with the industry suppliers, it was determined that it would not be possible to get a voice gateway router in time. However, I feel we have managed to complete enough of our project to show how the technology functions and prove it can be viable on campus. The poster and presentation for Wednesday are done, and work has begun on the final report. So we are just pretty much pulling all the remaining loose ends together.
